SPEERS' BOROUGH PETITIONS FOR STATE AID IN ROAD WORK

Application Prepared for Improvement of Section of River Road

IS FIRST BOROUGH TO ACT

Other Boroughs and Townships Along Same Highway Route Expected to Take Similar Action—Section Runs From State Street to Dunlevy

Speers' borough is the first along the river to take steps for joint improvement of roads with the state and county. Council there has prepared an application properly signed and attested to be presented to the state highway department, formally requesting state aid after a plan successfully carried into effect elsewhere in the state.

The road in the borough the borough council proposes for improvement is 3,500 feet in length, leading from State street, a continuation of Pennsylvania avenue, to the Dunlevy borough line. It is a part of state highway route No. 268, and an important connecting link along the river.

The application is signed by C. S. Walters, burgess; William Steel, president of council and attested by James T. Heffran, clerk.

If the proposed plan of improvement goes through the state will pay one half, the county one fourth and the borough one fourth of the cost of improvement. Shortly it is expected similar action will be taken by other boroughs and townships along the same river route.

500 SCHOOL CHILDREN WITNESS HISTORICAL DRAMA "THE CRISIS"

Five hundred or more school children witnessed the great historical drama, "The Crisis," this morning at the Coyle theatre and enthused over the remarkable production of Civil war times. They enjoyed the film upon dismission for a certain period from school, and North Charleroi school children joined the crowds from Charleroi. This afternoon the regularly advertised shows are being given and this evening there will be shows at 7 and 9, with music by Nirella's augmented orchestra from Pittsburg. Additional musical features will include solos by Mrs. George Clark that come in fittingly with the story. Thestory, written by Winston Churchill deals accurately with events preceding and during the time of the Civil war.

That morning they bought the land from the Ada Coal and Coke company for $23,050, and two hours later sold the same tract to Harry S. Scheibler of Greensburg for $45,000. The land is located at Cheat Haven, on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. Another sale was recorded, when the H. C. UNITED STATES CALLS WOMEN TO HELP NATION

The first call, since President Wilson read his message to congress, to women of the country to do their bit and do it in the back yard at home was made by the United States government today when it began sending throughout the country pleas to the housewives to plant food gardens in every spot of available ground.

At the same time the National Emergency Food Garden Commission which is conducting with the Mail the nation wide campaign for planting more food gardens issued a warning to housewives to economize and to study the family wants with the greatest care.

"Now is the time" said Charles Lathrop Pack, the president of the commission, "to combine health and food preparedness. Not only should every one in the country who has a plot of ground, plant vegetables but the greatest care should be exercised in preparation of the food. Do not buy more than will be used. Do not permit any waste.

This country must conserve its resources for winter is coming and you should make your garden work to the limit and then can the part of the crop that is not eaten. This prevents waste and also provides for winter.

"Newspapers, city officials, civic organization and Boy Scouts are co-operating with this commission which is sending out free garden lessons to hundreds of newspapers. This activity is one of real preparedness and in the last analysis is a great big war or peace measure for it makes for better living no matter what the future may bring to the country."

AWAITING CALL INTO ACTIVE NAVAL SERVICE

D. M. McCloskey, Charleroi Attorney, Ready for Duty With Uncle Sam—Is Qualified With Experience as Wireless Operator.

David M. McCloskey of Charleroi, widely known as an attorney, is awaiting a call into active naval service as a member of the Naval Training Association of the United States, New York city district. Last week Mr. McCloskey was in New York city and was informed then by the commandant in charge that no one knew when the call would be issued, but that it might come soon.

Last summer Mr. McCloskey was among those from western Pennsylvania who took a month's training on the Rhode Island. He specialized in wireless operation, with which he became very proficient.

Recruiting is being carried on with a rush in New York city according to Mr. McCloskey, who saw lines of men awaiting their turn to enlist. This applies to all branches of service and particularly to the navy.

The next thing in order ought to be a congress of historians.

DOUBLE PROTECTION

Speers' crossing is to be doubly protected. Such is the decision of the Public Service Commission's investigator of accidents made after investigation of a double tragedy at the fatal crossing in March.

Already the Pennsylvania Railroad has a warning bell there and all reports to the contrary the bell is working well. It is of electrical operation and has not been known to willfully fail at any time. But it lacks what might be termed human instinct. This apparently is needed in the absence of a bridge or underground crossing.

Testimony at the coroner's inquest revealed the fact that the two persons killed March 6 at the Speers crossing were badly confused. It was partly the fault of the bell, though to its everlasting credit it was ringing its hardest to prevent an accident. The trouble was that the two women seemed unable to fathom which train it was ringing for.

The railroad proposes to place a watchman at the Speers crossing and to keep the warning bell in use. If this does not prevent accidents, then there is no hope with present arrangements.

TRUE AMERICANISM

No more can the United States afford to permit persons of unknown business the inspection of government works than it can afford to permit suspicious persons to remain at large. While they might not do damage and while the majority of them would attempt to do no damage, the thousandth one might blow up a big lot of valuable property.

Let it be reiterated that in critical times like the present, the country cannot take chances. The [illegible] too great. The true American citizen will accept this as essentially correct and not worry. For others it does not matter.

WHAT OTHERS THINK

RUSH FOR MARRIAGE LICENSES

The newspapers report that the rush for marriage licenses on the part of young men subject to military duty, should this country adopt a compulsory military bill, or resort to conscription, has within the past few days exceeded in number that of any period known in the license courts.

If these young men are getting married simply to escape military service, their action does not speak well for the patriotism of our young men. It is only another evidence and reason why this country should adopt a permanent military system of training.

Were such a system in force in this country, every young man on attaining the age of 19 years would be subject to military training, unless physically unfit. He would be obliged to give a few months of his time to his country every year for three or four years. He would be trained so that if his country needed his services he would be prepared. Even if there was no call, the young men would be better fitted for the active duties of life, better fitted to assume the obligations of citizenship.

One of the best reasons why compulsory military training is necessary to the life and safety of a republic is because the selection of young men of this age does not impose additional burdens on the country in the way of pensions for dependents—widows and children. In this country under a volunteer systesm, many young men who ought to be among the first to enlist hold back while the enthusiasm of many married men carries them into the ranks, even though they leave dependents who may later be a burden to the state. Such a system is unfair both to the country and to its citizens. The nation does not always get the best men, physically fit, and is obliged to assume a burden which lasts for a generation or two afterwards.

It is difficult to understand the attitude of those statemen, or so-called statesmen, who sit in congress, who oppose a permanent compulsory military training measure. The present situation of this country, with our knowledge of the experiences of England and other democratic nations, ought to be sufficient to make such a law unanimous.

President Wilson says that the safety of the country depends on such a measure and every intelligent citizen, who has studied the experiences of England in the recent war, must realize the absolute necessity of such a measure for the permanent safety of the republic.—Washington Observer.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

The day of many portable possessions was moving from town to the seashore for the summer. A cab had been thought big enough to convey her and her property to the station and the cabman sat there, bossing from the stage of disgust to another still deeper, while his vehicle inside and out, was piled high with a miscellaneous assortment of cheap shell belongings. At last the task of loading came to an end.

"Is that all?" enquired the cabman, in polite incredulity.

"Yes," was the reply.

The cabman looked surprised. "Seems a pity," he ejaculated, "to 'ave the doorstep."

The agent marched up to the front steps and rang the door bell briskly.

"Good morning," he said, bowing politely to the maid who answered his ring. "Is the lady of the house engaged?"

"Not now," responded the maid brightly. "She used to be, but she got married more than a year ago."

A few years ago Bryant was appointed lieutenant in command of the naval radio station at Arlington, and in 1916 he was assigned to sea duty. RECEPTION TENDERED TO NEWLYWED COUPLE

A reception that was in one flattering and embarrasing was tendered Earl C. Sleeman, chief draughtsman of the Pittsburg Steel Products Company, and his bride Wednesday night. Those of the clerical force of the plant surpriseed Mr. Sleeman by calling upon him and escorting him to a truck for a ride and then placing at his disposal a mule that he was required to ride about the street, handcuffed meanwhile. The final part of the reception was carried out at the home of the newleyweds, 725 Washington avenue, where Mr. and Mrs. Sleeman were presented with a beautiful floor lamp and two lockers. C. W. Regester made the presentation speech. Response was made by both.

The wedding of Mr. Sleeman and Miss Salena Jackson occurred a week ago at the home of the bride in Pittsburg. They spent their honeymoon in New York city and returned to Charleroi on Monday, to take up their residence on Washington avenue.

GETTING AHEAD.

Are You Giving the Last Man on the Job a Chance to Pass You?

Don't laugh at that green, ungainly looking but hardworking and always on the job fellow who has joined your force. In a few years you may be asking him for a job.

No; it is not at all impossible. There are thousands of such instances. You can think of some yourself.

That new chap may not be as natty ly dressed as you are, he may not be as keen at repartee, he may not be a "fast stepper," but he may possess the characteristics by which he may climb fast while you slip back.

The time you spend enjoying yourself or may be using in study will help him to advance.

One of these days there may be a change in the business and the young man of whom you are making sport may step into the high place.

Should that time come do not be so small as to say that he must have had some kind of "pull" or "that he was a fool who worked overtime and did everything he could to get a stand in." Maybe he did. You might have done the same. So shut up and take your medicine.

But do not let the next one get ahead of you.—Toledo Times.

GRANDEES OF SPAIN.

Curious Hat Etiquette That Marks Their Three Classes.

A grandee of Spain enjoys the privilege, granted him many hundreds of years ago, of remaining "covered" in the presence of his sovereign. The custom dates from the period when, according to the theory then held, the king was "the first among equals."

The ancient formula always at the coronation of the kings of old Spain was, "We, your equals, choose you to reign over us." And the king assented in this declaration of his nobles.

There was a time when all grandees of Spain wore their hats in the presence of the king, but in time the idea of caste began to prevail even among the grandees with the result that they were eventually divided into three classes, and these classes were distinguished by the hat etiquette.

The first class entered the royal presence covered; the second class entered uncovered and, after an advance of a few steps, put on their hats, unbidden by the king, and the third class also entered uncovered, but did not "cover" until requested to do so by the king. Then, according to the etiquette, "all were equal."

There have been grandees who were not Spaniards, notably the Duke of Wellington, upon whom the Cortes conferred the honor in recognition of his services to the state.

Judging a Cigar.

How can the ordinary person who smokes tell a good cigar from a poor one? This question was put to a prominent manufacturer, who answered in this fashion:

"There is but one way that I know. In order to get everything that is in a cigar—the aroma and taste—it is necessary to light the cigar, take a couple of puffs, then allow the smoke to pass through the nostrils. When you do this you get the two things that are in a weed, the aroma and the taste.

"It is interesting to a man who knows the business to see a smoker take a cigar, look at it and then place it to his nose for a smell. Neither the look nor smell of an unlighted cigar means anything.

"I repeat, it is necessary to light it and start to smoke it in order to learn whether it is good or not."—New York Globe.

People Who Do Not Whistle.

Arabia must be a heaven for those whose lives are made a burden to them by the whistler. The Arab maintains that a whistler's mouth cannot be purified for forty days and nights, and they assert of the whistler that Satan has touched his body and caused him to produce the offensive sound. Then there are the natives of the Tonga islands, Polynesia, who hold that it is a sin to whistle, as it is an act disrespectful to God. Even in some districts in north Germany villagers declare that if one whistles in the evening it makes the angels weep.

Understanding.

In its wider acceptation understanding is the power of perceiving and conceiving, exclusive of the sensibility; the power of dealing with the impressions of sense and composing them into wholes, according to a law of unity, and in its most comprehensive meaning it includes even simple apprehension.—Coleridge.

Easy Enough.

"I don't see how there ever came to be so many words in the world," exclaimed a girl who was studying her spelling lesson.

"Why, sis," said her brother, "they come through folks quarreling. Then, you know, one word always brings on another."—London Tit-Bits.

He Was In It.

"I want to cancel my lease."

"Cancel? Why, isn't the apartment just as I represented it?"

"Too much so. You advertised 'continuous hot water,' but I didn't know that it referred to the neighbors."—New York Times.

Useless.

"Your wife has filed suit for divorce. Are you going to contest it?"

"No. It wouldn't do me any good. I've lost every argument I ever had with her."—Exchange.

COUNTY COURT HOUSE WILL BE PROTECTED

Additional Guards Placed by County Commissioners—Rumors Heard of Threatened Attacks—Same Precautions Elsewhere

Steps, considered necessary on account of the war situation have been taken by the county authorities to guard the court house. There have been rumors—and there were rumors Wednesday—of threatened attacks on public buildings, not only here, but elsewhere. Consequently the commissioners deemed it advisable to take some precautions. For the first time Tuesday night, a guard was put at the court house, in addition to the regular watchman who is on duty at the building every night.

It was stated by the commissioners that persons having business in the court house hereafter must transact their business during business hours and at times when the officers are regularly open and some one in authority is there. Orders have been issued for a change in the locks on the front doors, and it will be known who has the keys for these doors. No one will be admitted after business hours except on reporting to those in charge of the building at night and not then unless they have some good reason for being admitted.

The same precautions are being taken elsewhere over the country. The commissioners know there are keys out for the front door of the court house and that persons have gone into the building at night and in some instances, in leaving the building have left the doors open. Hereafter no one will be admitted after business hours.

MARRIAGE MANIA DOES NOT HIT THIS COUNTY CLERK'S RECORDS SHOW

Few Licenses For First Ten Days Than for Same Period in Six Years

The marriage fever to escape conscription which is sweeping the country has not struck Washington county yet, although the clerk of court's office in Pittsburg has been swamped during the last day or two. In fact there were less marriage licenses issued in Washington county from April 1. to 10, inclusive, this year, than during the same period in the last six years. The number issued from April 1 to noon of Tuesday, the 10th, is just 19. Of this number only eight of the men are American born between the ages of 19 and 25 years. and three between these ages are foreign born. The others are all over the age of 26 years. In fact there has only been seven times during the last 20 years that the number of marriage licenses issued in this county during this period has been 19 or under.

The records show that all pevious records have been broken in New York City, where 482 marriage licenses were issued Monday. This is the greatest number issued in one day since the marriage license bureau was established there. Sixty per cent of the men were between the ages of 19 and 25 years. All records were broken in Pittsburg Monday, when 164 licenses were issued, which is more than for any day there since the marriage license law went into effect. Four men were kept busy all day.

Reports fom all sections of the United States show that all pevious marriage license were broken Monday. In Philadelphia 276 were issued. St. Paul issued double the number, as on the same day last year. Cleveland, O., established a new record with 143 and at Denver the number for the day was 50 per cent above normal. In San Francisco there was a jump of 100 per cent during last week over any previous record. An even 100 were issued at Boston. The war is given as the cause for this increase.

GREB AND AL RODGERS TO COME TOGETHER IN BIG BOUT ON SATURDAY

Harry Greb, premier Pittsburg middleweight on Saturday night at the Charleroi rink will attempt conclusions in one of the season's biggest offerings here, with Al Rodgers of Buffalo, N. Y., who claims title over Greb. Both men are working hard for the fray, and both are determined to decide the claim finally. Greb and Rodgers have to their credit victories over some of the best fighters in the business and their meeting in the Charleroi ring Saturday will be the signal for a gathering of the clans from far and wide. William Riley of Monessen will referee.

INDIAN INDIA.

The Part Ruled by Natives In Their Own Right and Names.

The notion prevails in the United States that all India belongs to the British and is administered by them. This is an utterly erroneous idea. A very large and populous portion of the peninsula is in the possession of its own people, and is ruled by them, with little or no interference from the British. I have coined the term "Indian India" to differentiate between the India belonging to Indians and that in the possession of the British.

Indian India, with its area of 550,000 square miles, is almost one-third as large as continental United States. Its population, 75,000,000 persons, is a little less than four-fifths that of this country. Politically British India is united. It is divided into three presidencies and twelve provinces, which are under the supreme government of India presided over by the viceroy and governor general, who is under the secretary of state for India—a member of the British cabinet. Indian India, on the contrary, is not one political entity.

During recent years I have had the privilege of coming in close contact with several Indians who rule in their own right and name, and I have watched their public and private lives. Without a single exception I have found the Indian rulers to be men of great administrative capacity and statesmanship, all devoted to the welfare of their subjects and interested in all sorts of reform movements. Not many public servants or business men in America or elsewhere work so hard or so unselfishly as do these Indian potentates.—St Nihal Singh in Southern Workman

ENTIRELY TOO FAMILIAR.

The Man Intended to Be Polite, but He Courted Disaster.

It was considered surprising that the wife of the man who was putting up the new palace should have asked for a new foreman. But she did, and it was no more than the duty of the architects to obey. So a new superintendent reported the next morning.

One of the architects had the courage to ask the august lady what had happened, since the former superintendent of the job, which was easily the most important the firm had, was known to be polite and courteous always. It seemed, according to the lady, that he had been "familiar."

"Familiar!" repeated his employer in frankly expressed astonishment.

There was no further explanation offered, so it was to the offending superintendent that his employer turned.

"All I can think of," the superintendent said, "is the fact that I asked how the children were. Word came down one morning that Mrs. X. could not see me because the children were ill. When she did appear the next day all I said was I hoped the children were better. I guess from the way she froze up it must have been that."

And later investigation showed that the lese majesty had consisted in just that inquiry after the children.—New York Sun.

Changing the Remedy.

Professor Richet informed the Academie des Sciences at a recent meeting in Paris that he had proved that microbes very quickly accustom themselves to a medium that at first is poisonous to them. Therefore he suggested that wounds should be irrigated with several different antiseptics, using one one day, another the next and never bathing the wound with the same antiseptic two days in succession.

The editor of La Nature suggests that this idea may be applicable also to internal medicine and may explain why each new remedy produces for several days a marked improvement, but ceases to be effective as soon as the microbes and the body have become accustomed to the new medicine.

Odd Veranda Decoration.

A well known hotel in Marblehead, Mass., has a large brass dial set in the floor of one of its verandas, on which are indicated the points of the compass and also the directions in which several important cities lie and their distance away. It shows, for example, that Montreal lies to the northeast approximately 340 miles away, that London is almost due east 3,785 miles distant and that 942 miles to the southeast is Bermuda. This unusual decoration in the floor of the veranda, says Popular Mechanics, is a source of much interest to the guests of the hotel, who come from many quarters of the globe

One Difference.

"Can you tell me," said the court, addressing Enrico Ufuzzi, under examination as to his qualifications for citizenship, "the difference between the powers and prerogatives of the king of England and those of the president of the United States?" "Yezzir," spoke up Ufuzzi promptly, "King, he got steady job."

And There They Are.

Rather Cynical.

GARDEN COLUMN

The Mail is conducting this column with the co-operation of the National Emergency Food Garden Commission to inspire the planting of more food gardens through out the country. Members of the commission are, Charles Lathrop Pack, president of American Forestry Association; Luther Burbank, Dr. Charles W. Eliot; Prof. Irving Fisher; John Hays Hammond; Fairfax Harrison; Myron T. Herrick; Dr. John Grier Hibben; Emerson McMillin; A. W. Shaw; Carl Vrooman, assistant secretary of agriculture; Capt. J. B. White, U. S Shipping Board; James Wilson, former secretary of agriculture. You should watch this column every day. Any questions should be written on one side of the paper and sent to the Garden Editor of the Mail.

Transplanting.

If you have started garden plants indoors in seed boxes or pots you must take great care in transplanting them, says today's bulletin from the National Food Garden Commission, which is cooperating with this paper in urging food garden planting to cut the cost of living.

Transplanting is a crisis in the life of a young plant, and weak ones often cannot stand it. Therefore select the sturdier plants.

You must "harden off" indoor plants before setting them in the garden—that is, gradually let them get accustomed to the exposure. This is done first by setting the seed boxes and plants in open windows and reducing the amount of water given to them.

But do not let the boxes become so dry that the plants wilt.

Gradually increasing the exposure, after a few days you can leave the plants outdoors uncovered all day and even on mild nights. Then they are ready for transplanting. The hardening process requires about two weeks when the weather is still cool.

When the plants are growing in pots, berry boxes or in the earthen sides of sods, the transplanting is easy. From clay pots plant, roots and soil will usually come out in a single lump. This should be set in the garden a little deeper than the seed was when planted. The bottoms of the berry boxes should be cut off.

From the seed box transplanting is harder. If possible take the young plants up with sufficient soil so that their roots are not exposed. If the dirt shakes off, then you must "puddle" the roots by dipping them into thin mud. Do this immediately so that the roots are not exposed to the air on the way to the garden.

Work swiftly in the garden, setting the plants in holes punched with a round stick. Press the soil just enough to give the roots thorough contact with the earth, allowing no air spaces to remain under the surface.

A cloudy day or just before nightfall is the best time for transplanting. Ordinarily it is not necessary to water the freshly transplanted seedlings.

Now Who Wouldn't Attend School in the Open Air on this Beautiful Ocean Beach in Sunny California

When the Board of Education of Venice, California, decided a month ago to experiment with an open-air school the idea was to have a building open on all sides. But the development of the idea brought this unique class-room on the sandy beach swept by Pacific breezes. The school convenes on the sands only on Fridays, and Miss Lillian Bishop, the teacher, instructs her scholars during the morning in regular subjects of their elementary course. After the morning session the children are taken for a dip in the surf and receive swimming instruction
